IS HE NOT A LOVABLE YOUNGSTER?

And Would You Not Like to Own Him?

In this last wish you would, no doubt, be disappointed, for Mr. and Mrs. van Dresser would hesitate a long time before giving up their oldest son! Master Cleland, for such is his name, posed for his father's illustrations to his mother's book—GIBBY OF CLAMSHELL ALLEY—and great was his chagrin in not being allowed to have his hair cut all the while he was posing.

GIBBY OF CLAMSHELL ALLEY, by Jasmine Stone van Dresser, just published, is a delightful study of a genuine Yankee boy. The innermost workings of a little boy's heart, his absolute unself-consciousness, his shrewdness and appealing gentleness are portrayed with unusual insight and sympathy. You will exclaim that here is another "Huckleberry Finn," or indeed another "Penrod."

Gibby's adventures in an old-fashioned New England salt water town bring out all his native wit and entertaining humor. The life and the typical characters of the down-east folk are portrayed so vividly that you will smell the salt marshes and hear the creak of tackle as the fishing boats go out.

Gibby and his friends, his struggles and final success, will "reach" you, will pull at your heart strings, and will leave you the richer by another friend for life—little "Gibby" of Clamshell Alley.

PROTECTION OF A TITLE

One of the most vexing problems in all copyright procedure, if not the most vexing, is that of the protection of a title. Neither the American nor the English copyright code provides protection for a title and it has been left to the courts to thresh out precedents. Generally speaking, while they have held that there is no such thing as a copyright in a title taken apart from the text itself, they have shown themselves increasingly more willing to recognize that while a title cannot be copyrighted, it can, once it is established, be protected at law. This is particularly true in the case of a play, and in fact the courts generally seem more inclined to protect the title as an integral part of a play, than in the case of a book, because the advertising of a play with a title which coincides with the title of another and well-known play may very easily mislead the public and constitute unfair competition.

This point is well illustrated in the interesting decision in Klaw v. General Film Co., which we print elsewhere. Here the point involved was the use for a motion picture film of the title of a widely known play on the legitimate stage, "A Fool There Was." This case is the more interesting because the title as originally used for the play was not original with it, but had become almost a public catch-phrase through its wide quotation from Kipling's poem. There was in this case no question whatsoever of copyright infringement, but not only was the complainant granted an injunction against the defendant, but he was actually awarded an accounting of damages. Although operating to all intents and purposes as a temporary copyright in a title, this decision is based on what really amounts to a trade-mark or proprietary right to a trade-name in the title in question.

This practice of protecting in equity as a trade-name a title which by registry or in the public mind has become well-known to the public as identifying a specific article is fairly well established in the case of periodicals, even though the title be a "standard English word not fanciful or manufactured."

Under this same principle well-known series of books have been protected in such cases as those involving the title to the "Chatterbox" annual; to "Dr. Eliot's Five-Foot Shelf" and to the "Franklin Square Library." The trade-mark right in an individual title was recognized in Weldon v. Dicks so far back as 1878 in the case of the novel "Trial and Triumph," in which case Vice-Chancellor Maline enjoined quite another book under the same title, though the title was chosen in ignorance of the first book and in entire good faith. Likewise, as to the title "Splendid Misery," used by Miss Braddon in 1879, Sir James Bacon, in the Chancery suit of Dicks v. Yates, in 1881, was inclined to support the claim of another author, who had used the title in 1874, until it was shown that it had also been used by a forgotten novelist in 1801 and had consequently become, in a measure, common property. General titles, however, cannot be protected by advancing this claim of a trade-mark or proprietary right to them as trade names, as has been demonstrated in such cases as those over the titles "Bibliographic Universelle" in France, "Post-Office Directory" in England, and "Irving's Works" in the United States. The law would seem to have been stretched in this last respect, however, by Judge Green, in the U. S. Circuit Court in New Jersey, in the case of Social Register Association v. Howard, in which the title "Social Register," as descriptive of a social directory covering Orange, New Jersey, was upheld on grounds of equity and an injunction issued against "Howard's Social Register" as practicing unfair competition.

AN AMERICAN PUBLISHER'S NOTES IN NORTHERN EUROPE.

(From the notebook of B. W. Huebsch.)

DISCOUNTS are shorter than in America, yet booksellers in Scandinavia are prosperous and contented. Puzzle for the A. B. A.!

"ONKEL LANGBEN" caught my eye in the window of a Kristiania book shop. A closer examination and a moment's thought proved it to be a Danish translation of Jean Webster's "Daddy Long Legs."

IN KRISTANIA the Tidens Tegn (daily) has been running a serial by Burton E. Stevenson, and in Rotterdam the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant was printing Ernest Poole's "The Harbor" in the same manner.

THE PICTURE-JACKET HABIT is strongly entrenched in the cheap fiction of Europe. Low-priced translations of Jack London, H. K. Webster and other Americans appear in colored wrappers in Scandinavia. And there is no escape from "Freckles" and other American best-sellers of that class.

THEY TOLD ME in Sweden that the law limits the number of bookshops to one to 10,000 of population, and that there are no vacancies. Booksellers and publishers are well organized, and the latter control the situation so that a bookseller requires their consent in order to enter the business. The reciprocal arrangements, however, modify the apparent harshness of that condition.

EVERYWHERE there are evidences that the European is more ready to accept translations than we are. This is particularly true of the theater. Translations of German dramas are common in northern Europe. An "Everyman" play by Hoffmansthal drew steady crowds in Stockholm. Among the translations of English and American plays running while I was abroad were "It Pays to Advertise" in Stockholm, and "The Great Adventure," "Man and Superman" and "Potash and Perlmutter" in The Hague. I had no time for music halls, but was told that many so-called American "acts" are delivered with a strong cockney accent.

IN A DAY'S VISIT to Ellen Key at her Swedish home on the edge of a beautiful lake, not the least interesting thing was an examination of her library. The range of her interests is suggested by the presence of classic and modern books in French, Italian, German and English, besides those in the Scandinavian languages. There is an amusing incongruity in the American section, and Miss Key confirmed my surmise that some of the books were gifts and not her selection. Our classics are represented in part by odd volumes of Thoreau, Emerson and Longfellow, and from among our contemporaries she owns books by Jack London, Upton Sinclair and Robert W. Service.

IN ADDITION to the huge guest-book which her visitors sign with a large quill dedicated to that soleuse, Miss Key possesses several albums with literary and graphic contributions from many of the great artists of our time. I observed sentiments signed by Strindberg, Selma Lagerlöf, Sonya Kovalevsky, Ibsen, Björnson and Brandes. Ibsen quoted from himself, "The strongest man is he who stands alone," and on the same page, with a date showing that it was added three months later, Georg Brandes wrote, "The highest achievement is pain, for through it we work and strive for that which we love." (My translation is free and perhaps imperfect.) A friend of Miss Key, who accompanied me on the visit, interprets the quotation as bearing on a tragedy early in the great woman's life.

SECOND-HAND ORDINANCE AMENDED TO EXCLUDE BOOK-SELLERS

The far-famed second-hand ordinance which classed New York City booksellers in the same category with junk dealers was passed by the Board of Aldermen March 22 in an amended form which expressly excludes booksellers from its provisions by the following amendment at the end of section 40, that "Nothing contained in this ordinance shall be construed to apply to pianos, books, magazines, rugs, paintings, drawings, etchings and engravings; nor to exchanges of, returns of, or credits on merchandise where the article or articles exchanged, returned or credited are accepted in full or part payment for new merchandise; nor to the first purchase or sale in the city of New York of any imported second-hand article."

It will be recalled that after the measure had been passed and duly signed by the Mayor on December 1, it was voted, on January 3, to suspend it until April 1. It was given a public hearing on March 20 before the Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen who afterward recommended its passage in the amended form.

LORD & TAYLOR BOOK-SHOP TO OPEN APRIL 3.

THE new Lord & Taylor Book-Shop in the Lord & Taylor store at 38th street and Fifth avenue will open on April 3 and the opening will be marked by a special exhibition of Stevenson manuscripts and first editions and a lecture on "The Making of a Book," illustrated by motion pictures taken at the Country Life Press. The lecture will be given in the auditorium on the eighth floor at eleven and again at three. All who are interested are cordially invited to attend.

As was announced at some length in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for January 29, the Lord & Taylor Book-Shop will be conducted by Doubleday, Page & Co. and the latter expect to try out some interesting experiments in bookselling in the new shop. H. C. Kinsey, well known to the trade as a Doubleday, Page traveler and recently elected a member of the board of managers of the Booksellers' League will be in charge for the present.

WORLD BOOK CO. OPENS CHICAGO BRANCH.

ELSEWHERE in this issue we reproduce a photograph of the new middle-western home of the World Book Co. at 2126 Prairie Avenue, Chicago. The building was purchased from A. Watson Armour on October 23, 1915, the tenth anniversary of the first copyright taken out by the World Book Co., and was occupied on January 1, 1916.

The Chicago building marks another stage in the healthy growth of the company which

THE NEW CHICAGO HOME OF THE WORLD BOOK CO.

Caspar W. Hodgson founded in 1905 in an old-fashioned attic at Yonkers-on-Hudson.

While the home office has moved from its attic into a three-story garage and thence into its present quarters, the middle-western business has also grown steadily, under the direction of O. S. Reimold, until the company felt warranted in giving it this attractive home of its own.

In the new Chicago branch, styled by the company The House of Applied Knowledge, the same business will be handled as in the home offices at Yonkers, with the exception of the editorial and accounting work. The promotion end of the business for the middle-western states will be handled from Chicago, and also the shipping.

In extending an invitation to the members of the trade to "drop in and see them," the members of the Chicago staff announce that "the house-warming shall last just as long as our friends from whatever quarter shall make our new home, while in Chicago, their own."

COPYRIGHT NOTES.

MOVING PICTURE INTERESTS URGE NEED OF UNIFORM PAN-AMERICAN COPYRIGHT PRACTICE.

PAUL H. CROMELIN, of the Cosmofotofilm Company, has prepared a statement concerning the copyright laws of the Pan-American States and their relation to the motion picture industry which has been sent to William Gibbs McAdoo, chairman of the United States Section of the International High Commission. The members of the Commission have just started for Buenos Ayres, where will be held, from April 3 to 15, the Fourth International American Conference Convention on Literary and Artistic Copyright.

In the statement, which is indorsed by the Motion Picture Board of Trade, Mr. Cromelin points out that:

"As our relations with our Pan-American neighbors develop, original stories, the copyrights in which belong to citizens of those countries, will undoubtedly be used as the basis for motion picture plays. In many countries there is no formality required to-day in the matter of conferring copyright upon the producer of a literary or artistic work. Its publication automatically vests in the author or his assignee the copyright. There is no uniformity to-day in the Pan-American republics as regards registration. In some countries, notably Chile, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, San Salvador, Venezuela and Nicaragua, no time is specified within which the formality of registration must take place. In other countries the time varies from within fifteen days from time of publication in Argentina to two years from such time in Brazil."

As a result of this confusion the manufacturer of motion pictures has no way of telling whether a scenario or story, originating in one of the Pan-American States, is copyrighted or not, and so may incur a heavy penalty for an infringement that was innocently entered upon.

It is requested that under these circumstances the penalty for such infringement be set at a nominal sum. Also it is greatly desired that a uniform copyright law be decided upon by the Pan-American States, and the commission is urged to take up the matter if the opportunity arises.

COURT PROTECTS TITLE OF PLAY.

The decree of Judge Platzek in the Supreme Court, Special Term, New York County, on March 3, 1915, in the case of Marc Klaw et al., v. General Film Co. (154 N. Y. Sup.) has recently been appealed and the higher court has affirmed the original decision. This decision is especially interesting in that the court not only granted an injunction restraining the infringing play but also ordered an accounting. Following is the text:

Some five years ago Robert Hilliard, one of the plaintiffs, a popular and gifted actor, first produced an elaborate dramatic production entitled "A Fool There Was," at the Liberty Theatre in the city of New York. From that time the play has been presented and is now being produced throughout the United States and Canada with success, both from an artistic and financial standpoint. Large sums of money have been expended by the plaintiffs for actors, actresses, hiring of theatres, the equipment of the play, and in extensive advertising for more than four years. After the dramatic representation "A Fool There Was" acquired a reputation, its title became well known, and the defendant appropriated the title "A Fool There Was" and produced it in connection with one of its photo dramas, with knowledge that the plaintiffs had been and were producing a dramatic representation under such title. It appears that the title "A Fool There Was"

is an original title in connection with a play, and that no other play under such title was presented prior to the production of the drama by Robert Hilliard. The circumstance that defendant's play is dissimilar to plaintiffs' play, or that it was produced as a photo play, does not militate against their right to enjoin the appropriation of and use by the defendant of the title.

"The question, 'What's in a name?' has been answered by the courts in many well-considered cases, wherein the exclusive right to a name possessed or owned by a successful business enterprise has been maintained against imitators and wrongdoers, who sought by an unauthorized use to deceive the public and profit by the wrong." Frohman v. Payton, 34 Misc. Rep. 275, 68 N. Y. Supp. 849; Hopkins Amus. Co. v. Frohman, 202 Ill. 541, 67 N. E. 391; Outcault v. Lamar, 135 App. Div. 110, 119 N. Y. Supp. 930; 38 Cyc. 837.

In Aronson v. Fleckenstein (C. C.), 28 Fed., 75, it is stated:

"The name given the composition by its author, and under which it has become known to the public, becomes, as it seems to me, a property right—not strictly on the principle of trade-mark, but because the name and literary composition became blended and united, so that the name identifies the composition to the public—so that the name of this composition belongs to this complainant as identifying and describing his literary property, and as a part of the piece itself, and defendants have no right to profit by using this name to the injury of the complainant. * * * and defendants have no right to avail themselves of the merits and popularity of complainant's play to draw audiences to the performance of theirs, even if, as it is claimed, their composition is a new and original dramatic arrangement. It is a fraud upon the public, as well as upon the complainant, to attempt to do so."

In Ball v. Broadway Bazaar, 194 N. Y. 435, 87 N. E. 674, Werner, J., writing for the court, says:

"Although we agree with the learned Appellate Division in recognizing the technical distinction between trade-marks and trade-names, we think the same fundamental principles of law and equity are applicable to both. 'All such cases, whether of trade-mark or trade-name, or other unfair use of another's reputation, are concerned with an injurious attack upon the good will of a rival business; customers are diverted from one trader to another, and orders intended for one find their way to the other.' Sebastian on the Law of Trade-Marks, p. 17. Trade-marks and trade-names are in reality analogous to the good will of the business to which they appertain. The trade-mark represents it in the market, and the trade-name proclaims it to those who pass the shop. In either case such unfair conduct as is calculated to deceive the public into believing that the business of the wrongdoer is the business of him whose name, sign, or mark is simulated or appropriated constitutes the gist of the offense."

It was also held in this case that:

"Trade-names are protected by the application of the same principles of equity that relate to technical trade-marks." Howard v. Henriques, 3 Sandf. Ch. 725; Glen & U. Mfg. Co. v. Hall, 61 N. Y. 226, 19 Am. Rep. 278; Paul on Trade-Marks, § 182.

It is not disputed that plaintiffs' play is produced with success by leading actors and actresses in the principal cities of the United States, and was a valuable theatrical production. It is not disputed that the defendant presented a moving picture presentation under the title "A Fool There Was." It affirmatively appears that the defendant produced its photo play under said title in different cities of the Union no less than 3000 times without authority. In Kalem Co. v. Harper, 222 U. S. 55, 32 Sup. Ct. 20, 56 L. Ed. 92,

A GOOD EXAMPLE OF A VERY SIMPLY ARRANGED DISPLAY WHICH IS "MADE" BY THE PRESENCE OF ONE ATTENTION-COMPELLING OBJECT.

Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1285, it held that the owner of dramatic rights might forbid the dramatic representation by moving pictures, and to the present time the only right to protect moving pictures arises from the words "dramatic" or "drama." Photo Drama Co. v. Social Corp'n (D. C.) 213 Fed. 374-377; Atlas Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 204 Fed. 398, 122 C. C. A. 568, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1002; Frohman v. Fitch, 149 N. Y. Supp. 633. The plaintiffs have established and acquired an exclusive proprietary right as a trade-name and a trade-mark in the words "A Fool There Was" as a title in connection with their play, and they are entitled to a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from the continuance of the infringement and impairment of their right in and to such trade-mark or trade-name.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA.

A DESPERATE, but bloodless and scarless, battle was fought out by heavy artillery at the monthly meeting of the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia on March 17 at the Franklin Inn Club. Probably the day added something to the vigor with which the point in debate, "Are there too many books published?" was contested. The affirmatives, represented by W. S. Lewis and L. A. Keating, hurled devastating arguments from their 75's of experience as book-buyers. The negatives, E. W. Mumford and C. F. Kindt, brought their heavy 42's up and responded cheerfully and destructively to their opponents' hot-shot. There are not too many books published in America, as evidenced by the figures of comparative book production per head in foreign countries, triumphantly asserted the "negs." That being so, replied the "affs," how about the jobs we are constantly solicited to buy? The field of potential book-buyer has hardly been touched as yet, said the "negs," with illustrative examples of boys and girls saving their pennies for the purchase of the latest books. This potentiality doesn't always "pote," countered the "affs," with dark hints as to potentiality of the egg coop and the number of chickens that really emerge. So the battle swayed to and fro, here a trench lost, there a little ground won. The presiding officers, J. LeGallez and A. P. Hughes, were inflexibility itself, and at great cost they manfully repressed their personal sympathies during the progress of the combat, and held with even hand the scales of justice. They have friends in both places, or, rather, on both sides.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected after the smoke cleared away: President, A. P. Hughes, American Baptist Publication Society; secretary, R. G. Kornbau, of J. C. Winston Co.; treasurer, W. M. Bains. The reports showed that the association is growing in numbers, usefulness and effectiveness, and a better and bigger growth is assured for the forthcoming year's work.

COMMUNICATIONS.

WANTED—SUGGESTIONS FOR BOOKSELLERS' CONVENTION.

Editor THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

The program committee for the American Booksellers' Association convention coming May 16, 17, 18, is anxious to have the discussion run to topics that are of the most vital interest to retail dealers throughout the country. As chairman of this committee, I should like very much to hear from anyone who has suggestions that they would like to make that might increase the interest in the speaking program and enhance the value of the discussion to all who attend.

I shall be glad if you will publish this letter in order that I may reach the booksellers of the country with this call for co-operation.

OBITUARY NOTES.

LORD ROLAND SUTHERLAND GOWER, sculptor and author of a number of works on history and the fine arts, died in London on March 9 in his eighty-second year. His books include: "My Reminiscences," "Life of Joan of Arc," "Rupert of the Rhine," "Stafford House Letters," "Bric à Brac," "Last Days of Marie Antoinette," "De Brosse's Letters from Italy," "Life of Sir Thomas Lawrence," "Life of Sir D. Wilkie," "History of the Tower," "Old Diaries," "Life of Michael Angelo," "Life of Thomas Gainsborough," "Records and Reminiscences, 1903," "Life of George Romney," etc.

Mrs. JULIA FRANKAU, known for many years to the American and English reading public as "Frank Danby," died in London, March 17. She realized about two weeks before that she had written her last novel and dictated a farewell message from her deathbed to her American readers who enjoyed her books. The message was sent through her American publishers, Dodd, Mead & Co., who only recently issued "Twilight," the novel she had written under the influence of morphia. Mrs. Frankau was born in 1864, and was educated at home by Mme. Paul Lafargue, the eldest daughter of Karl Marx. When only a girl she began journalistic work, writing for the Saturday Review and other periodicals. In 1883 she was married to Arthur Frankau, who died in 1904. Her first novel, "Dr. Phillips, a Maida Vale Idyll," was published in 1887, when she was 23 years old. Two years later, "A Babe in Bohemia" was published. Mrs. Frankau then abandoned novel writing and for ten years devoted herself to the study of engraving and other arts, publishing "Eighteenth Century Colour Prints," 1900; "Life of John Raphael Smith," 1902; "The Lives of James and William Ward," 1904. She relapsed into novel writing and published "Pigs in Clover," 1902; "Baccarat," 1904; "The Sphinx's Lawyer," 1906; "A Coquette in Crape," 1907; "The Heart of a Child," 1908; "An Incomplete Etonian," 1909; "Let the Roof Fall In," 1910; "The Story of Emma, Lady Hamilton," 1910; "Joseph in Jeopardy," 1912; "Concert Pitch," 1913; "Full Swing," 1913; "Nelson's Legacy," 1915; "The Story Behind the Verdict," 1915; "Twilight," 1916. Mrs. Frankau's three sons are at present serving in the British army.

PERSONAL NOTES.

STEPHEN W. MEADER has accepted a position with the Reilly & Britton Company.

THE ENGAGEMENT of William P. Albrecht, of the Macmillan Company, to Miss Anna R. Van Daniker, of Baltimore, is announced. The date of the wedding has not as yet been set.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE REILLY & BRITTON COMPANY desires us to state that they have extended the time for receiving reviews of "The Daredevil" in their booksellers' contest to May 15th.

THE PENN PUBLISHING Co. report that the first edition of "Our Miss York" was exhausted within a week after publication, and that the second edition, the tenth thousand, is now on the press and will shortly be ready for delivery.

"CHARLES FROHMAN, MANAGER AND MAN," the authorized life of the great theatrical magnate by Isaac F. Marcossion and Daniel Frohman, will be brought out in book form early in the autumn by Harper & Brothers. It will be illustrated with photographs and human documents, and will include a foreword by Sir James M. Barrie.

THERE is some misunderstanding in the trade, we believe, as to the date of the annual Philadelphia Calendar Convention, some believing that it is going to conflict with our American Booksellers' Association convention in Chicago. This is fortunately not the case. The Calendar Convention comes the week of May 22, the Booksellers' the week previous.

ONE OF THE MOST interesting of the peace forecasters, H. G. Wells, will soon be heard from in a volume called "What Is Coming: A Forecast of Things after the War," which the Macmillan Co. are publishing. The contents includes a discussion of the possibilities of a World State; "Will Peace be Permanent?"; "How will mankind stand towards each other?"; "What will be the position of female suffrage?"; and "Will the British Empire remain intact?"

MOST READERS of "Drink and Be Sober" and "Eat and Grow Thin" are probably not aware that Vance Thompson adds the rôle of novelist to that of essay-writer. His latest book, "The Carnival of Destiny," soon to be published by Moffat, Yard & Company, has for its theme the reappearance of an extraordinary and vivid personality in the persons of women living in times ranging from the Stone Age to the Nineteenth Century.

THE TEXT-BOOK for citizen training camps prepared by Captain Lincoln C. Andrews, U. S. A., under the supervision of Major General Leonard Wood, will be published shortly by Lippincotts. Major Andrews has returned to service in the Philippines, where he was the first American Governor of Leyte, and bore a conspicuous share in the pacification of the Viscayans and Moros. His text-book was the outcome of actual service in training civilians in camp, as well as new recruits to the United States Army.

A VARIETY OF INTERESTS are represented on the Stokes list for April, which includes, in fiction, "The Whirligig of Time" by Wayland Wells Williams, a first novel, centering around the relation between brother and brother; in agriculture, "The Spirit of the Soil" by Gordon D. Knox, a book of rural science having especial reference to the new product "humogen"; in philosophy, R. W. Frazer's "Indian Thought Past and Present"; and in travel Raffaello Piccoli's "The Book of Italy," to which such writers as Galsworthy, Sidney Lee, Gilbert Murray, and others—and such artists as Sargent and Pennell—have contributed.

THE STAGGERING TOTAL of 4,000,000 is said to be the record of sales in Germany of "Hindenburg's March into London." The English, with equal avidity, devoured the first large edition of the translation, and subsequent editions, as fast as the presses could print them. To-day the first American edition comes from the John C. Winston Co. The book is said to be an astonishing revelation of the German mind and of the complete belief of Germany in the godlike qualities of the Kaiser, the invincibility of the German army, and the justice of their cause.

WE ARE FAR FROM the time when we must say in despair "Every book has been written!" for each new invention brings new plot possibilities. Twenty years ago the story of B. M. Bower's "The Phantom Herd" could not have been written, for this new story of the west—to be published April 8 by Little, Brown & Co.—tells how the Happy Family had so much faith in Luck Lindsay's moving picture story that they pooled almost their last cent for its production, trooped to New Mexico, and there lived the story of "The Phantom Herd" while Luck registered it on the camera.

SUGGESTIVE OF "EREWHON"—and that has truly a pleasant sound to those who have found that Nowhere land—is Archibald Marshall's "Upsidonia," scheduled for April publication by Dodd, Mead & Co. In the strange land of the title the rich man has no money, the respected are ragged, losers at cards win the stakes and everything else is correspondingly inverted. A certain young man ventured into the country, fell in love and learned to despise our modern materialism. McCutcheon's "The Light That Lies," and "The Second Coming; a Vision," by Frederic Arnold Kummer and Henry P. James are to come from the same publisher on April 1 and April 8 respectively.

FOUR BOOKS received by Houghton Mifflin Co. too late to be included in their spring announcements are a "Life of Samuel W. McCall" by Lawrence E. Evans; "To Ruhleben and Back" by Geoffrey Pyke, a Cambridge undergraduate who made his way into Germany only to be caught and held at the famous prison camp from which he made a sensational escape; "Kitchener's Mob" by James Norman Hall, a young American who served six months in the trenches with Kitchener's Army; and "A Soldier of 'The Legion,'" by E. Morlae, the American-born son of a French immigrant, who started for Paris forty-eight hours after war was declared and is now back after a year's service.

SENATOR ASHURST has introduced a new price-maintenance bill into the Senate which differs from the Stephens bill, as originally introduced into the Senate by him on January 27, in the following respects: Section c now reads: "Such contracts for the sale of such article or articles of commerce may provide for [seasonal] disposal sales [twice yearly] at," etc., bracketed matter being omitted; "at retail" has been omitted wherever, in section c, the original bill read, "dealers at retail"; midway in section d the following has been omitted: "Provided, that such dealer, or the legal representative of such dealer, shall file at the office of the Federal Trade Commission a statement setting forth the reason for such sale, the refusal or neglect of such vendor to accept such offer, and the grade, quality and quantity of such article or articles of commerce to be so sold."

Into an amazing Pennsylvania Dutch household Margaret Berkeley steps, straight from the chivalrous scheme of life that characterizes a Southern home. The Leitzels dwelt in New Munich and the marrying Daniel was endowed with two spinster sisters. They ruled with iron hand the Leitzel home; indeed their sway went far beyond to the household of their brother, and gave Margaret a one-sided fight for her self-respect and the rights of her children.

Moore, Leslie. The wiser folly. N. Y., Putnam. c. 5+354 p. col. front. D $1.25 n.

The action takes place on an old estate which the occupying family holds as the outcome of violent happenings in the past, culminating in a written renunciation of a former baronet. The document recording this renunciation has, however, been lost. With the opening of the story, there steps upon the scene a descendant of the man who made the renunciation, and this claimant has all the necessary proofs of his kinship. Dispossession of the Delanceys seems inevitable. But the new heir does the unconventional which is satisfactory to everybody, even the lady of the tale.

Houghton Mifflin. c. 323 p. pls. D $1.25 n.

David has spent most of his ten years in the mountains with his father, a famous violinist. The two are perfectly happy with their violins and the life of the forest about them. The boy has inherited his father's talent, and is taught to express his own moods on his instrument. At last they start down the mountain, but strange circumstances intervene. For a time David finds his outlook black indeed, but nothing can daunt his courage and his gift of bringing happiness to others, and in the end his cherished dreams come true.

Again the insidious Chinaman returns to his old warfare against the white race. Again he is opposed only by the indomitable Nayland Smith and the devoted Dr. Petrie. As is expected, Fu-Manchu travels dark ways; his servants still fear but dare not betray him; and his weapons are more terrible and strange. Against this man, Smith and Petrie fight on, through momentary victory and defeat, up to the last thrilling adventure. And all the while, moving through their lives with a wistful charm, is the beautiful slave girl, Karamaneh.

Sherman, C. Only relatives invited; a social and socialistic satire. Indianapolis, Bobbs-Merrill. c. 315 p. D $1.25 n.

Situation, which by its gaiety, reduces divorce to an absurdity. Miss Appleby, an aged lady, has called her kindred together in order that she may choose an heir to her large estate. So they eagerly come to the strange house-party. They are all exponents of the Age of Alimony—the recently unmarried, the married again, the remarried, the just married and the children of these various combinations. The old lady has a horror of divorce, hence the suppression of true relationships and the subsequent embarrassments.

The Publishers' Weekly

Subscription Rates.

One year, postage prepaid in the United States, $4.00; foreign, $5.00.

Single copies, 10 cents. Educational Number, in leatherette, 50 cents; Christmas Bookshelf, 25 cents.

Advertising Rates.

One page.....	$25 00
Half page.....	14 00
Quarter page.....	7 00
Eighth page.....	4 00
One-sixteenth page.....	2 00

The above rates are for unspecified positions. Special rates for preferred positions (full pages only).

Higher rates are charged for the Summer Reading, Educational Number and Christmas Bookshelf, and for the monthly Book Review supplement sections.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday night.

Under the heading "BOOKS WANTED" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Unspecified wants, reprinted matter, and all advertisements from non-subscribers, cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "BOOKS FOR SALE" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

ONE OF THE BOOKS

Which we recently manufactured complete was the "Anthology of Magazine Verse" for Gomme and Marshall.

Concerning this book the New York Times Book Review of January 9th has the following very flattering comment:

"And if the editor of the Anthology deserves praise for the work of his brain and hand, it would seem only fair to add that he has been ably seconded by the hand and brain of his publisher. A more tasteful and beautiful volume than the 'Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1915' would be hard to find—certainly at the very modest price asked for it."

The Biggest Book of the Year

ITS PREDECESSORS

Novels that have stirred humanity—high and low alike—"Quo Vadis," "Ben Hur," "Salamambo" and "Hypatia." These books have enjoyed tremendous sales, in all languages, because they have thrillingly pictured, as dry history cannot, the dramatic and vital epochs and supreme characters in the history of the world. These books appeal powerfully to readers of all classes, because the vivid and human presentation of great figures and events bears upon, and enables us better to understand, the life of our own time.

ORIGIN

While Sienkiewicz in "Quo Vadis" dealt with the comparatively well known period when Christianity was in its birth struggles in Rome under Nero, no historian or novelist until now ever undertook to present the colossal drama of the final struggle of Christianity with Paganism in Alexandria at the close of the Fourth century—the most crucial era in the history of religion, when the great massacre at the Temple of Serapis occurred, and when there lived and reigned over men's hearts Mary of Egypt, one of the most fascinating women in the world's history.

PURPOSE AND PREPARATION

This wonderful story presents the final battle of Paganism and the religion of the Cross, and tells of massacres, killings, intrigues and heroisms as thrilling as any under Nero. In the story of Mary the author depicts the eternal struggle of womankind over man's age-long exploitation. All women who yearn for greater freedom and equal rights with men will read, and urge others to read, this interpretation of their immemorial struggle.

This novel's great religious and spiritual problems are the very ones vitally confronting us now, when the world is torn by war. Bearing the supreme Christ message of redemption through love, this book will unquestionably prove of potent appeal and significance to every thinking man and woman living in the world today.

This novel is absolutely authentic, and as a work of scholarly research, will rank with Flaubert's Salamambo. In preparation for the writing, the author spent three years in study in the libraries of America and Europe, exhausting all documents bearing on the period in the British Museum in London.

We earnestly believe these facts point to a tremendous sale, even exceeding that of its great forerunners. Write for Window Display Material, Posters, Post Cards, etc.
